COMMENT SOUGHT ON ADDRESSING CHALLENGES TO BROADBAND DEPLOYMENT FINANCING

NBP Public Notice # 28

PLEADING CYCLE ESTABLISHED

GN Docket Nos. 09-47, 09-51, 09-137

Comment Date: January 8, 2010

In the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (“Recovery Act”), Congress directed the Commission to create a national broadband plan by February 17, 2010, that seeks to “ensure that all people of the United States have access to broadband capability and ... establish[es] benchmarks for meeting that goal.”<sup>1</sup> Among other things, the Commission is to provide “an analysis of the most effective and efficient mechanism for ensuring broadband access by all people of the United States”<sup>2</sup> and “a detailed strategy for achieving affordability of such service and maximum utilization of broadband infrastructure and service by the public.”<sup>3</sup>

One identified obstacle to broadband access in rural communities is the lack of available private financing for network deployment, whether through capital investment, debt financing, or other financial support.<sup>4</sup> While several federal programs support broadband deployment in unserved and underserved areas, challenges in obtaining private debt or equity support that prevent effective deployment remain. Even with government support, many enterprises may be unable to achieve a profitable operating model, and the business case for potential deployment projects in many rural areas may be inadequate to merit sufficient private sector support.<sup>5</sup>

In an effort to address these challenges, the Commission seeks comment on the potential private sector and government funding vehicles for effective financing of broadband deployment projects in rural and high cost areas. While many of these vehicles may be outside the Commission's scope and jurisdiction, the Commission is considering a range of potential vehicles in order to address the Congressional call for "an analysis of the most effective and efficient mechanism for ensuring broadband access" to all Americans.

Recognizing the issues are complex and differ in various contexts, the Commission seeks to focus on how government policies and programs create more effective incentives for private financing of deployment of broadband infrastructure in the country's underserved and unserved areas.

1. What existing federal government institutions, program mechanisms, and sources of funding could be employed to create greater incentives for privately financed rural broadband deployment?<sup>6</sup>
  - a. What current federal programs administered by existing institutions, including Rural Utilities Service and National Telecommunications and Information Administration, provide instructive precedents for innovative financing support vehicles, such as loan guarantees?<sup>7</sup>
  - b. What types of federal government financing (one-time grants, ongoing grants, loans, loan guarantees, etc.) are best suited in what contexts and what would be the respective levels of private financial leverage we can expect each type to provide?
2. What new financing methods should be employed to increase effectiveness and encourage entrepreneurship in the private sector for supporting rural broadband deployment?
  - a. How would the new financing vehicle be structured and administered? What would its cost be, both financially and administratively, and how would the government ensure the sustainability of the overall program to continue future support?
  - b. How can existing financing vehicles (e.g., grants, loans, etc.) be leveraged and/or rechanneled to create appropriate incentives for private sector financing of deployment in rural areas? What would be the qualitative and quantitative impact on private behavior for different types of support (e.g., one-time grants, ongoing grants, loans, revolving loans, etc.)?
